

FACILITATOR PROFILE

Kylie McLerie

Kylie McLerie is inherently a teacher and has held positions in educational leadership at school and regional levels for the past 26 years. She is a Wellbeing Lab Licensee and Facilitator across the Michelle McQuaid Labs. Kylie is an inspiring, experienced and highly motivated facilitator who has a genuine passion for engaging groups and teams in critical and creative thinking. She has been told that she can draw any group of people together and get those collective thought process happening in a supportive and practical way. With a background in education, educational leadership, leadership coaching and, as a cross sectorial business consultant, she understands people and the importance of human agency in all organizations.

Kylie is all about connection and sees all relationships as genuine two way learning opportunities. She harnesses the collective wisdoms of people, teams and organizations and uses this data to plan innovative ways forward. She has worked across sectors to champion employee and organizational wellbeing and links this as an imperative for productive workplace cultures. She leads with authenticity and strengths based leadership and building workplace cultures where people feel valued, safe and places they want to be apart of.

Kylie's clients span a diverse range of industries and include organizations in the public, private and not-for-profit sectors, as well as coaching clients and workshop participants from kindergarten students to Executive Directors, CEO's and Boards. Committed to helping people grow, Kylie is an astute coach and questioner and can work with people to uncover their potential and capabilities, their aspirations and goals, their willingness and motivation and plan clear and measurable paths forward.

Kylie's strengths lie in getting people working together and facilitating thinking that is limitless and then bringing that down to manageable and incremental change. She understands people and gets the best from them.
