Jo Deadman

With more than 25 years working in HR and the vast majority of that in the areas of Learning and Development and Talent Management, Jo's experiences are broad and deep. Having lead both domestic and global talent functions, she has been the internal game-changer in Learning and Development, and the subject-matter-expert in focusing on the future within Talent Management.

Now the external consultant, Jo has brought her experiences with organisations of different sizes and complexity, providing support for individual leaders and high-potentials in the shape of 1-1 coaching, facilitated learning, as well as inspiring team development and organizational change.

Past and present clients all enthuse over Jo's energy and commitment, describing her as passionately curious, insightful and creative with her solutions. You'll also hear humorous, tireless positivity, direct and with a tenacity that won't let you off the hook. She has a genuine interest in enabling change, using evidence-based approaches that inspire action and longevity.

Jo's experience of facilitating programs includes early careers and first line managers right through to senior executives and the c-suite, and reflects an intuitive, agile and energizing style of facilitation.

I am very thankful I was able to attend this leadership program. It was truly a career and life changing experience that I will carry with me forever. Your impact over those three days is impossible to exaggerate, and as a team we couldn't be stronger or better leaders because of it.
